Everyone reads. Everyone saves. Everyone wins.

The screenshot shows the Gale Virtual Reference Library interface. At the top, it says 'Gale Trial Site' and 'Contact your Sales Representative'. Below that, there are search options: 'Basic Search', 'Subject Guide Search', and 'Advanced Search'. The search results for 'Garbage and Recycling' are displayed, including the title 'We Are Running Out of Room for Garbage' by David Lazarus. The document type is 'Topic overview'. There are options to 'Bookmark this Document' and 'eBook links'. A 'Tools' menu is visible on the right side of the page.

This screenshot shows the 'AS YOU READ, CONSIDER THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS:' section of the eBook 'We Need More Space for Garbage'. The questions are: 1. How much garbage does each American produce every day, according to the author? 2. What does the word 'hyper-consumerism' mean in the context of the viewpoint? 3. According to Lazarus, what percent of trash is being diverted away from landfills in California? Below the questions, there is a paragraph of text: 'The garbage now piling up on East Bay [San Francisco] sidewalks is a smelly, vermin-infested reminder of how easily we take for granted the idea that no matter what we throw away, there'll be some place to put it. The reality is that the United States is awash in garbage, and we're rapidly running out of ways to dispose of it.' There is also a small image of a pile of garbage.

Greenhaven Press titles like Introducing Issues with Opposing Viewpoints encourage students to think critically and form their own conclusions
